Pre-Kindergarten Classroom

Miss Hill's Pre-K class read "The Do Nothing Machine". This book is about a young boy that creates a machine using items he had at home. The young boy realized that during the process of creating his machine it was unable to do anything; however, he learned how to enjoy making something from nothing.

Pre-K was so taken by this young boy that they wanted to make their own do nothing machine. They used items in the classroom, worked as a team in order to make a group do nothing machine. Each group had to name their machine, tell you what they like for it to do if it was a real machine, list the name and functions of the parts on their machine and tell what they learned from working in a group to create their do nothing machine.
